UNDERSTANDING "CHURCH"

It is always such a blessing to celebrate Eucharist, pray and share with brother priests who are so genuine, holy, decent and committed to Christ. I hope you find my thoughts on Ecumenism helpful this Sunday and next.

This week I had the privilege of time for study with a group of priests from across the country. We discussed the Apostolicity of the church, the relationship between Catholic and Orthodox Christians and cooperation in evangelization between Catholics and Pentecostals. Our speakers were excellent as we worked long days on the hopes and challenges in Ecumenism, the vital work of promoting unity as Christ wants. Much has been done, but a vast amount remains still to do. It is blessed to note how much good will exists among many Christian groups as they discuss each other's views with respect and appreciation. This is very complex with people having strongly held views historically conditioned. One example was given of "Friendly divisions within borders" when people have little understanding of their faith and are at home in a Catholic, Lutheran, Presbyterian, etc., worship service. It is great that people come together praying in Christ as Savior; however, problems arise when we do not know what we believe. There is much to be said for acceptance and appreciation of all faiths, but there is need for honest dialogue based on history, truth and desire to know what Christ wanted and set in place for all time. In the many denominations there are "contrastive identifiers" which are important but can be a problem if not dealt with in patience and love. There can be a tendency at times for us to say "We all believe in God, Jesus, and the Bible, so why can't we all get along since one way is as good as another?" It is not that simple – we have many Christian expressions and unity is the mind of Christ. There is a great desire all over the world to promote unity and we must work relentlessly for this.

In addition to the above topics we discussed the recent Vatican statement on the church. The reaction to this in the media caused some anger and confusion among Catholics and non-Catholics alike. Often the secular press can misunderstand church activities. In our discussions we went into all aspects of the document. It is largely internal to the Catholic Church to help Catholics be sure of the value and importance of the church now and always. The Pope is not opposed to Ecumenism but is stating our belief so all can see who we are and dialogue from there.

Those who do not realize that this is what the church has always taught find it astonishing, but upon further reflection find it is not something new. There is continuity here with all the church has taught over the years. It is consistent with what Vatican II meant. The tone may not have been attractive to everyone, but the content is normal and necessary. Some will have difficulty with it but should not stop working together with other Christians in love and respect to acknowledge what we see to be truly of Christ and the Gospel, and thereby the church, in one another. Most Catholics, and indeed the Pope, would not deny that many denominations which have emerged in the almost 500 years since the Reformation are indeed called "churches" in common language today. All the Pope is saying is that these are not churches as Catholic theology understands "church". It is important to see in the document that "separated communities are neither deprived of significance or importance in the mystery of salvation." Differing understandings must not impede us from dialogue and forging from that dialogue relations based on mutual trust and understanding, but we cannot set aside how one's own tradition understands the truth. Ecumenical dialogue is meant to restore unity to the Body of Christ, but this unity is built on truth. Dialogue is not meant to undermine one another's claims but to understand them. This can be painful, time consuming, slow and tedious but what a reward!

Catholic identity is very important in every age, so I share a few words on the meaning of church in this context. It is clear that the church begins with Jesus Christ who is its head as the church is His body. It belongs to Him and all who call themselves followers of Christ must form His church. Christ by His death and resurrection has gained for all people salvation and a holy way of life. He wants all his followers to know Him and love Him sharing His life with others in the church. All those whose lives are shaped by God's grace are, in the same fashion, related to Jesus Christ and His church. The church, of course, is to be a visible community marked by three signs: (1) The profession of the apostolic faith; (2) the celebration of the seven sacraments; and, (3) apostolic governance.

The apostolic faith was proclaimed in the preaching of the apostles themselves and is found in the New Testament. The essentials of the apostolic faith in the official teaching of the church has been preserved through the action of the Holy Spirit promised by Christ to protect and guide the church always.

The seven sacraments of the apostolic churches are the actions of the Risen Christ and continue to be celebrated in the Catholic Church and Orthodox churches.

Apostolic governance in the church is continued historically through the body of pastors that succeeds to the authority of the apostles and evangelizers and heads of local churches – the college of bishops in union with the Bishop of Rome, successor to St. Peter.

The Catholic Church understands herself as enjoying, through Jesus' own will and love, all the gifts that He left for His people. Other churches and faith communities enjoy most or some of these gifts depending on their history or their own self-understanding. Indeed some sincere followers of Christ reject the Catholic Church's understanding of who the church is. We recognize this, but surely we have the right to have our understanding of church respected as should all others.

Also this statement says nothing about individuals' eternal salvation, nor does it draw any conclusions about any individual's subjective holiness. These are always left to God's supreme and merciful understanding.

Finally this document helps us to what we need – a clear grasp of our Catholic faith. Without this we are adrift and easily confused by articles and reports that interfere with knowing and loving our faith, secure in the church's teaching which comes from the apostles. We must be eager to share it and all Christ's gifts with our brothers and sisters in the human family. We read in Romans 14:17-19, "The Kingdom of God is not a matter of food and drink, but of righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Spirit. Let us pursue what leads to peace and to building up one another."

CATHOLIC COMMUNICATION: NEXT WEEKEND

Next weekend there will be a second collection in support of the annual Catholic Communication Campaign. Your donation will help fund the efforts of the Church to reach out to Catholics and others through print, television, internet and radio materials. The funds raised will benefit both our diocese and national programs. Special envelopes are available in the church vestibule. Please be generous. For more information on the Campaign, you can visit their website at www.usccb.org/cc.

CAPITAL CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS

The "official" end of the Capital Campaign was June 30th. As mentioned in last year's financial report, the short-fall on our parish's contributions has to be made up to the diocese from general funds. However, within the parish, contributions from those who have not completed their commitment will continue to be encouraged to reimburse the general fund. Specific results of the campaign will be included in the annual financial report.

MAKING CURRENT GIFTS FROM YOUR IRA

New law allows gifts to charity directly from your IRA. Recent legislation allows donors age 70 1/2 or older to make gifts to Catholic Relief Services using funds transferred directly from their IRA without paying taxes on the distribution. This manner of giving is in effect until December 31, 2007.

For more information, please call Fr. Kiernan in the Parish Office at 723-2494.
