CARITAS IN VERITATE (CHARITY IN TRUTH)

The following is adapted from an article on the US Catholic Bishops website announcing Pope Benedict's encyclical letter which was published on June 29:

Pope Benedict XVI's new encyclical, Caritas in Veritate, continues a long and powerful tradition of popes articulating biblical values and Catholic moral principles which should guide and measure economic and social life. Benedict XVI follows in the footsteps of Pope Leo XIII and subsequent popes. In 1891, Pope Leo wrote Rerum Novarum (Of New Things), which placed the dignity of work and the rights of workers at the center of Catholic teaching.

For more than a century, popes have courageously called Catholics and all people of good will to protect human life and dignity, to defend the poor and the vulnerable, and to pursue greater justice and peace. Now, amidst an international economic crisis, Pope Benedict assesses and responds to the "new things" in the global economy that have enormous moral and human consequences. He calls for solidarity at a time of increasing divisions, summons individuals to greater ethical responsibility amidst economic irresponsibility and places a priority on the poorest and weakest in the human family, whose lives and dignity are threatened by widespread deprivation and desperation.

Benedict XVI suggests that the economic crisis is, at its core, a moral crisis. He observes that we have lost our way by ignoring or violating the "truth" about the dignity of every human person, about responsibility for one another, about the common good, about the moral foundations of economic life. He offers the "truth" as taught by the Church through the centuries as an antidote to the moral relativism, dishonesty, greed, and unrestrained economic opportunism that helped bring about the economic crisis.

Pope Benedict affirms and extends Catholic social teaching by applying long-standing principles to new economic forces in a globalized world. He highlights that we are one human family, not simply competing nations or regions. He intensifies John Paul II's call for solidarity to be globalized.

The Pope builds on the message of his first encyclical, Deus Caritas Est (God is Love), and his clear insistence that concern for those who are poor is at the heart of the Church's mission, along with proclaiming the Gospel and celebrating the sacraments. He insists that how the poor and vulnerable are faring in the economic crisis is an essential moral measure of the global economy.

The Holy Father consistently connects personal and structural ethics, insisting that both individuals and institutions need to act in economic life with greater attention to moral principles and ethical criteria. He calls for personal conversion and ethical action by individuals as a foundation for structural steps toward a more just economy. At the same time, the Pope also calls for sweeping reforms to address the injustices that leave so many without hope and a decent life across the globe seeing the need for both new attitudes and new structures to promote both solidarity and accountability within the global economy.

Pope Benedict has consistently placed environmental ethics at the center of his social teaching. He makes clear connections between respect for the Creator and care for creation, between human and natural ecology, and between care for the planet and care for the poorest people on the planet. Environmental themes are addressed more thoroughly than in any other encyclical.

The Pope emphasizes once again the unity of the Church's teaching and witness for human life and dignity: protecting the unborn and the poor, defending the family from both economic and moral pressures.

The new encyclical is filled with nuance and complexity. Anyone who tries to reduce the encyclical to a bumper-sticker endorsement of their own economic or political preferences will inevitably distort its complete message.

Pope Benedict adds a powerful new chapter to the Church's prophetic tradition of applying the wisdom of the Scriptures and Catholic moral principles to the "new things" of our own time and situation. He brings much needed ethical analysis of how we got into this global economic crisis, and offers an essential moral framework for how we can move forward as one human family.

There is much in the encyclical that affirms and challenges us as we carry out the Church's social mission in the midst of this economic crisis. The Holy Father offers words of encouragement: "As we contemplate the vast amount of work to be done, we are sustained by our faith that God is present alongside those who come together in his name to work for justice... God's love calls us to move beyond the limited and the ephemeral, it gives us the courage to continue seeking and working for the benefit of all..."

SUMMER RETREATS 2009 CHRIST THE KING PASSIONIST RETREAT CENTER

FAMILY RETREAT: AUGUST 14 - 16

"Walking with God, Embracing Change"

In our rapidly-changing world, growing together as family can be quite a challenge. Faced with the varied demands of home, careers, school, relationships, and commitments, we might ask, "Where is God in all of this?" This retreat is an opportunity to pause and reflect on your family's walk with the Lord in these changing, challenging times. As we strive to embrace the change that's a part of life, where do we find our stability? Who guides us along the way? Who's voices do we pay attention to? What are the family stories that shape and inspire us as we walk with God? Through conferences and activities, prayer and conversation, we offer some ways to embrace change while staying attuned to the real and often surprising ways the Lord calls us to come and follow Him.

Retreat Fee: $110 per Adult / $50 per Child (6-16 years), ages 5 & under FREE; families of 4 or more, price is negotiable. To register, call Jane Oliver at (916)725-4720 Ext. 303 / lollver@passlon1st.org
