

August 30, 2009 - Twenty-second Sunday in Ordinary Time
"All good giving and every perfect gift is from above, coming down from the Father of lights..." James 1:17

 a letter from home...

ON TODAY'S READINGS

In today's reading from Deuteronomy, we find Moses instructing the Israelites on how they are to live once they enter the Promised Land. Remember, Moses will not enter the land with them. Therefore, in this book, over and over again, Moses reminds the people of who they are, of where they have been and to what they are called. Repeatedly and with great precision, Moses details covenant obligations.

One of the important and captivating qualities of Deuteronomy is its ability to draw us into the picture today. The words of Moses are not only addressed to the Israelites, but they are addressed to each generation of listeners – they are addressed to us.

Today's Responsorial Psalm calls us to "live in the presence of the Lord". This matches today's first reading from Deuteronomy – "you may live, and may enter in and take possession of the land." Who can genuinely worship God? According to the psalm, those who practice social justice can. This includes being truthful, not harming or criticizing each other out of revenge, despising "the reprobate"—those who may seem to get away with their crimes, but honoring those who "fear"—those who revere and respect the Lord. Whoever does these things "shall never be disturbed" from a genuine and authentic worship of God which enables us to "live in the presence of the Lord."

In the second reading, James continues on the theme and establishes a principle: the Christian is such because of an intervention of the transcendent goodness of God. Aware of this, disciples will have to live in practice all of the implications of Baptism that will promote an attitude that is fruitfully receptive to the Word of God because a listening that is merely superficial is not enough. The person who accepts the Gospel, through the vision of faith, becomes a child of God through the life that God communicates within Baptism and that immerses him solidly in an ideal environment of sacredness; thus, the faithful can be, in respect to all the rest of creation, a firstfruit offered in worship to God.

The Christian, by being baptized, lays aside the entire, overabundant accumulation of his moral evilness. By keeping himself in a state of meekness, of openness towards others, he will then be able to receive the Word of God that comes in be planted within him, as it is the seed deposited within his heart and will then bear fruit.

Always attentive to the concrete, James knows how much evil can be done to others through a careless word, and the Christian must know how to be vigilant, prudent in his way of speaking.

The gospel brings us the story the hypocritical Pharisees and scribes who oppose Jesus and serve as negative models for what it means to follow the true way and will of God in order to worship God authentically. Their hypocrisy warns us that our cherished religious traditions and customs, which are merely human precepts, can nullify the very word of God they are meant to supplement and support, if they serve our own selfish aims rather than God's plan. But by powerfully reaffirming God's word over human tradition, Jesus invites us to allow the original, genuine and clear word of God to purify the excesses that our various religious, social and cultural human traditions, customs and practices have introduced into our attempt to live authentic human lives through a genuine and sincere worship of God.

Through his new and authoritative teaching Jesus draws us away from an unnecessary preoccupation with external concerns in our worship of God, and calls us rather to cultivate a clean and open heart to facilitate a proper and wholesome relationship not only with God but with each other. Jesus makes us aware of our need to contend with and overcome the horribly wicked and destructive "defilement" of thoughts and actions that can emerge from the human heart, not only of others but of ourselves.

"We believe that the Gospel of Jesus Christ is a 'Gospel of Life'. We cannot simultaneously commit ourselves to human rights and progress while eliminating or marginalizing the weakest among us. Nor can we practice the Gospel of life only as a private piety. American Catholics must live it vigorously and publicly, as a matter of national leadership and witness, or we will not live it at all."
(US Bishops, Living the Gospel of Life, 1998)
