

June 6, 2010 - Solemnity of the Most Holy Body and Blood of Christ

"This is my body that is for you. Do this in remembrance of me." 1 Cor 11:23

 a letter from home...

THE MOST HOLY BODY AND BLOOD OF CHRIST

All Christian religions have an understanding and focus on the extraordinary gift of Christ to the world. We believe that this truly is the son of God; this is God present in our world. One of the things that is so dear to us as Catholics is the way we celebrate this truth. Different religions celebrate it in somewhat different ways. The way we do it is to place the experience of eating and drinking the body and blood of Christ at the very heart of our worship.

Let's look at the reading from Paul's Letter to the Corinthians, where we find the theme is, "Do this in remembrance of me." One of the difficulties of living in this world is that we tend to forget. We get distracted. We are often caught up with the things at the moment that are very important and necessary at the time-but perhaps are not the most long-term issues. It's a great danger to get caught up in the immediacy of life and to miss the time we need to reflect on what this whole process is about. The Eucharist reminds us, as it calls us back and reconnects us, of a teaching that is so extraordinarily simple and powerful: There is no way that we are ever expected by God to do the work we are called to do without him being an integral part of that work. There is almost no way to describe how our partnership with God works. We have so many images of how it works. It's about the Holy Spirit dwelling within us.

We have all these powerful symbols that point to the mystery of how we as human beings participate in divinity as we struggle to live out our destiny. Perhaps nothing comes across more effectively or powerfully than this practice of the Eucharist. One of the ways we can "remember" this is by experiencing something. Sometimes people just shake their heads when they hear these words about the Eucharist: "God entered into our world. The most powerful energy force there is came in, took the form of a human being, and then, before he left, he reminded us that he would like us to partake of his body and blood on a regular basis." He asked us to eat his body and drink his blood. If this concept wasn't a part of our religion, it might just be an appalling thought.

This is a very dramatic, powerful way of awakening in people an understanding of a mystery that cannot be described in the way it happens. It can only be described by the effect it has on people's lives. That cause and effect is one of the ways we are told in Scripture we are to pay attention to the work of God: We cannot describe this work or literally see it, but we will know it by its effects. When a priest says the words of consecration over a piece of bread or a cup of wine, there is nothing in what he is holding that appears any different than before he blessed it. Yet we are called to believe with all our hearts in the transformation of the bread and wine into the body and blood of Christ. Even though the physical appearance of bread and wine appears, there is transubstantiation, a change of this substance. Obviously, this is all about faith. It is all about believing. We just have to say, "I absolutely believe it." We are invited not so much to figure out how this works, but to know that it does.

The "remembering" of the reception of the Eucharist is to know firsthand whatever happens to the body and the soul of anyone when they have this experience. We are invited to experience the simple, awesome sense of God's presence and energy in our lives. The letter from Paul to the Corinthians tells us that one of the great signs of union in the body of Christ is that we are receiving and eating from the same loaf of bread. That is another way of saying that we are all infused with the same divinity. It's not a different God for each of us. It's the same God in every one of us. It's very easy for us, then, to imagine how deeply connected we are to each other.

God wants us to experience the union we receive through the gift of the Eucharist. The Eucharist is the sign of our unity. We have a unity of faith and belief, an acceptance of the system we use to help us remember and be close to God. It's a celebration of our unity as Catholics.

One of the most important things for us to know about this sacrament is to understand how God is revealing the extraordinary way that he works with you and me. God wants us to feel his partnership. If we are to feel God's energy, wisdom and strength helping us, then there must be something we are asked to do that is difficult. We are reminded of the way God set up the world. He set it up to remind us that we are hungry. Then he places us in situations where we go to things to try to satisfy our hunger. We find out that they are wanting. They don't satisfy. We try to satisfy ourselves with all the things the world offers. They do satisfy to a certain extent, but we end up telling ourselves, "There's got to be more to this than just these earthly pleasures I am filling myself up with."

God allows us to experience the emptiness, and out of that experience, we move to choose that which is most valuable and richest, spiritual food. God also allows us to experience the very person that Jesus is. Jesus is a person filled with energy who then gives himself, spends himself, for others. The image of the blood is one of the things that speaks so powerfully to us about the figure of Jesus. Jesus' blood was poured out for us. The blood always seems to be tied to forgiveness of sins. The action of cleansing comes from the action of a God who is self-giving and self-sacrificing. It's his blood that is poured out for our sins that cleanses us. It's one thing to be bathed in that image of forgiveness, but it also is the most challenging of images. It encourages, even

LIVING THE GOSPEL OF LIFE

"What the Church has said is that because it is the first gift from a loving God and the condition for all other human goods, all our other rights – life itself has to be a top priority. It is the most basic gift and if we lose the right to live we lose everything else."

Richard Doerflinger, Deputy Director of the Secretariat for Pro-Life Activities, US Conference of Catholic Bishops

FROM PRIESTS FOR LIFE:

Weekly Reflection: Sometimes there is tension between those who work to defend the right to life and those who work for "social justice." Yet there can be no social justice without establishing the most basic justice, the protection of one's life.

Weekly Prayer: Lord, enable your people who work for what is right to resist every temptation to minimize or neglect and aspect of the demands of justice.

Please keep in your prayers those voiceless and defenseless babies facing abortion and their mothers and fathers. Also remember there is healing after abortion for mothers and fathers. Call 1-888-HOPE-790.

BODY AND BLOOD OF CHRIST

demands, that we act in the same way toward our brothers and sisters. The cup of blessing-the cup of blood-is about having a sense of being forgiven, and in turn, going out and forgiving others.

We give our brothers and sisters the same life God has given to us. On this extraordinary feast of the Body and Blood of Christ, we are called to simply awaken ourselves to this reality. It is the most central symbol in our Christian church. We are to drink it in, to feel its power and its invitation to change us. We enter into the memory of this event of Christ in the world, and we are invited into a place of greater awareness. As we watch our world change so dramatically, as we see people growing in their awareness of what it is we are asking from one another-the kind of integrity we need in each other's lives to live as God has called us - it's a wonderful time to reflect on the source of that insight and awareness. We can then delight in the beautiful gift of the Eucharist and enter into the wonderful life we share with Christ - Christianity.
